

Be Resilient Challenge

Personal Training Plan

Getting started

Pressures in life are inevitable, but we react to pressure in two ways – they lead to personal growth if we believe we can manage them effectively, or they cause stress if we feel we cannot cope with them. Stress arises from how you perceive a situation. If you see yourself as being unable to cope with the demands of a situation that situation becomes stressful. The diagram below demonstrates the relationship between pressure and performance, it reminds us that we need a certain amount of pressure in order to achieve and be effective, but too much pressure causes strain and stress.

A person, who is more resilient, copes better with pressure. They:

- Demonstrate confidence, adaptability and flexibility, even in a fast-paced, pressured and culturally diverse environment – mental well-being.
- Display energy and stamina in meeting challenging goals – physical well-being.

They can implement their coping techniques well because they also understand their signs and symptoms of stress.

This 4-week plan is incredibly simple to follow. All you need to do is to build mental and physical coping strategies into your daily life. You don't have to do them all at once. At the start of each week plan what you are going to do on each day. Then week-by-week gradually build up the amount of statements you want to use.

Follow this plan and not only will you feel more confident and focused, you will also have improved concentration levels, feel more energised and have a renewed zest for life.

Track your progress using your personal training plan (shown on the next page) – print it off and stick it on your fridge, or in a visible place.
